In the latest celebrity news, Jaime Foxx may have just turned 50, but he is not showing any signs of slowing down! According to People.com, Foxx and girlfriend Katie Holmes celebrated the big five-oh with some friends in their inner-circle. The celebrity couple was seen walking into his big bash at Paramount Pictures together! Sources who were at the party said the duo appeared to have a great time at the party and spent very little time apart from each other. Foxx and Holmes have kept their relationship quiet from the onset of the rumors – but have been seen out and about with each other since 2013.

This celebrity couple has stayed almost entirely out of the limelight. What are some ways to keep your relationship on the down-low?

Cupid's Advice:

Sometimes, it's better to keep your relationship between you and your partner. If you're looking to keep your relationship quiet for the time being, read these tips straight from Cupid:

1. Keep it offline: In a world ruled by social media, it's important to refrain from posting or sharing anything related to your personal relationship! While your personal life might not be as documented by the tabloids, people in your news feeds will definitely talk and share the news with those around them. If you don't want others to know, keep it off the Internet until you're ready.

2. Stay in on weekends: Weekends are the days when most people go out, so if you're wanting to keep your relationship quiet, it's better to stay in. If you and your partner want to do things together out in public, there always is a risk of seeing somebody you know. Have day dates (if you can) or go out during the weekday, when most people are at home!

3. Don't talk: Loose lips sink ships! If you feel like your best friend or members of your family will spread the news of your new relationship to everyone in their general vicinity, don't share it with them! It's your relationship so if you're not ready to talk about it – you don't have to.
