2. Have your friends help: Having a child can be exhausting! Repeating the details to each and every friend and relative is the last thing on your mind, so ask one of your most talkative friends to spread the word. They'll enjoy telling the story, your friends will be happy to hear the news, and you'll be spending time with your new baby.

1. Ask questions and listen: Instead of telling your partner what to name the child, start to asking question to get their point of view on something. Ask your partner what is it that they really want. When they are ready to answer your questions and tell you, listen. Don't assume you know the answer; be open.

2. Be a team player: Approach the situation as a team player. Instead of blaming each other, solve the problem as a team. For instance, make a list of baby names you each like, and then swap that list to cross off any names of which you disapprove.

3. Be open-minded: Learn how to step out of your comfort zone and see your partner's perspective on things. Naming your baby is a touchy topic and can be emotional to discuss.
