Some things in life are worth the wait, and there are indeed some perks to waiting a little bit before departing on your honeymoon. You get to enjoy some time as husband and wife in the real world, finish planning the vacation and spend time with your loved ones before taking off. It's like the saying goes, "All good things come to those wait." Cupid has some tips:

- 1. Time spent with family: One of the perks of taking some time between your honeymoon and wedding is that you and your new spouse can spend a little time with your family and friends before being whisked away. Sometimes when people leave for their honeymoon right away, they don't get a chance to talk with their relatives for as long as they'd like. Have a get together with your families, look at wedding pictures and talk about the upcoming trip!

2. Reality sinks in: It will most likely feel like you and your partner are in a fairytale after tying the knot. An added bonus to waiting a little while before departing on your honeymoon is that the reality has time to really sink in. You'll probably need someone to pinch you to believe it's real life, but that's part of the fun. Take the time to enjoy this newlywed status. Yes, you're really husband and wife!

3. Devour the details: When you plan a wedding, there are a million things going on at once. When you're putting together the ceremony and reception, it's difficult to squeeze in the time to plan the honeymoon and all of the necessary details. Take this time now before you take off to plan all of the little details that you couldn't focus on before. Go shopping for your vacation and pick up things you think you'll need. Do some research on where you are going and book reservations for activities. Make the most of it, and pay attention to your special itinerary.

National parks are very easy on the budget because all you have to do is spend money on gas (pick a park close to home!) and then spend the night in a cheaper hotel or at a campground.

What are some ways vacation can bring you closer together as a couple?

Cupid's Advice:

The perfect getaway can spice up your love life. A tropical paradise, a cozy cabin in the woods, or even the right mountain can spark a flame that you cannot at home. Vacations are an easy way to break free of the everyday work routine. You have no other choice but to focus on the person you're with, which is why these three elements of a vacation are so crucial:

1. It creates a feeling of seclusion and intimacy: Vacations are perfect because they're all about escaping reality for a short while. When you and your honey travel together, there is an aura of seclusion that engulfs you. It's exciting to think that for miles the both of you only know each other. Nothing is familiar, so you make this place your own.

2. It allows you to have deeper conversations: When you're away from the hustle and bustle of your home life, you're able to find yourself focusing on topics of conversation that you may not have been able otherwise. The beach breeze coaxes deeper thoughts out of your mind that will flow freely like the waves of the sea. Relax and enjoy exploring the mind of your significant other.

3. Time isn't an issue: Vacations don't typically have set schedules, therefore you and your partner are able to move through activities at your own leisure. This way you and your man can discover fun activities that you both agree on, which can give you new experiences to build on. You may not be able to climb a mountain at home but here you can build some muscle, as well as solidarity within your relationship.

How do you know that your new relationship isn't just a rebound?

Cupid's Advice:

It can be hard to get over heartbreak and truly open your heart up to another partner. When you do find another relationship, how can you know that you've truly moved on and haven't just started dating this person as a rebound? Cupid has some advice for you.

1. Date them because you like them, not because you want to date. This is a common problem when you start to date again. You need to ask yourself if you truly like this person or if you just like having them around as a partner to fill the hole your last partner left. If you can't honestly answer that question correctly, maybe you shouldn't keep the relationship going.

2. Ask yourself if you could be happy without them. As important as it is to be happy with your new partner, you need to ask yourself if you could be happy as a single person. If not, maybe you need to learn how to be away from a relationship before taking your new one too far.

3. Think about why you're dating them. This might seem like the obvious way to go, but sometimes the answer to this question isn't very clear. Are you really dating them just to show off how much you've moved on? Or to get back at your ex? These are reasons showing that you clearly haven't moved on, and if your answer to that important 'why' question isn't "because I really like my partner," then yes, this is a rebound relationship.

What are some ways to work on your troubled marriage?

Cupid's Advice:

It's a sad thing when a marriage starts falling apart. When you said those vows, you planned on the relationship lasting a lifetime, and it may seem hard now, but it's not too late! If you want your marriage to work, you need to put in the effort. You loved each other once, and you can learn to do it again:

1. Spend some time alone together. Take time off work, turn off your phones, and go somewhere relatively peaceful. Maybe that's just staying home, or maybe it's going away on vacation. Either way, you need to put off other sources of stress and spend some relaxing, peaceful time as a couple.

2. Take some time to work on yourself. Marriage and time might have changed you, and you're no longer the person you were when you first met your partner. Find out if this change is the reason you're now unhappy in the relationship and whether or not you've changed for the better. Your partner should do the same, but that's their own choice to make.

3. Just talk about it. You've probably heard this a million times before, but it's probably the most important part of any relationship. Talk about what you want out of life, what you want out of your partner, and what you're not getting out of the marriage that you would like to have. There's a reason it's called 'awkward' silence. Nothing gets fixed if you just ignore it.
