Should you see it:

Director and screenwriter Destin Daniel Cretton has already proved to audiences in his last film Short Term 12, that he can create heartfelt films that accurately depict complicated relationships. This Jeanette Walls memoir has also been put on New York's Best Seller list. This film is worth watching for those who also enjoyed Larson's performance as a troubled mother in Room.

Who to take:

This film is date night worthy for book-loving couples! Try reading the book before you watch the film, and talk about the the two bodies of work as a couple.

Cupid's Advice:

In The Glass Castle, David and Jeanette seem to come from two different lifestyles. Although David is excited to be a part of her life, Jeanette feels embarrassed by her family. As a couple, you need to respect your differences, even if that means dealing with family drama. Here are some ways you and your partner can handle family drama as a couple:

1. Provide support for family: If your family or your partner's family is in a hard place right now, help them by offering to let them live with you temporarily. You could also give them money to help them during their tough time. They may not take your offering, but at the end of the day, you'll know that you tried to help as much as you could.

2. Keep distance while still staying close: Sometimes all family members want is space. You or your partner may feel the need to distance yourself from certain family members. That's okay, but try not to cut ties with your family! It's okay to not be on speaking terms after drama happens, but still remember how important they are. Check up on how they are doing by speaking with another family member that's close with them or eventually have you and your partner speak to them.

3. See a family therapist: It's nice to sit down with your family and discuss the problems you have together. Having a family therapist can help you work out problems that have gone unresolved since childhood or new problems that have recently occurred. You and your partner should attend sessions together just to make sure everyone is on the same page. It's also okay to have more private sessions with family, but at least let each other know how you are feeling.

1. Don't talk badly about them: When you go through a break-up, it only feels natural to throw some negative comments their way. However, if you want to remain civil and support them, it is better off to keep those comments aside and speak more positively about them.

How can you pump some life back into your relationship?

Cupid's Advice:

Especially if you've been with the same person for quite some time, you can eventually get stuck into a routine with them. It may seem to you like the desire you had for them when you first started dating isn't there anymore. You've lost that spark, or connection. Well, if you want to revive what you deem a dead relationship, check out our advice below.

1. Take a look at yourself: Do you know how you're contributing to the lull in the relationship? Nobody wants to admit that they're personally responsible. You may think that it's much easier to blame someone else. However, before you start playing the blame game, take a look in the mirror.

2. Don't think about what's fair: You'll probably have to practice guiding your partner to a better relationship. It's unrealistic that it will come naturally. It's not fair, and it's going to take some work on your part, but it's what will save your relationship.

How to Pursue Your Man Like Naomi Watts

By Brea Gunn

Everyone knows the formula: boy meets girl, boy flirts with girl, boy asks girl out and boy and girl become an item. But what happens when girl meets boy and girl pursues said boy?

While it's not unheard of for a woman to have a crush, it's becoming more fashionable for her to be the pursuer, rather than the pursued. Take Naomi Watts and Liev Schreiber, for example. The pair met at the Metropolitan Museum of Art's Costume Ball, and the rest is history, as they say. Or, actually, it's HERstory.

The thing is, unlike other couples, Naomi actually pursued Liev. That's right. The actress made up an excuse, flew to New York and now the couple have two beautiful children. A woman pursuing a man isn't necessarily a new phenomenon in Hollywood, though. In fact, it's starting to feel like the norm.

For example, Rachel Weisz married Daniel Craig after meeting the super-hunk on the set of their new movie. LeAnn Rimes and Eddie Cibrian couldn't keep their hands off each other (their very married hands!) when they met. Jessica Alba thought Cash Warren was a stud, and now they've got a beautiful family.

And sometimes life even imitates art...or art imitates life. Even Anna Paquin couldn't keep her eyes off of costar Stephen Moyer. And ironically, Sookie, her character on their show, True Blood, pursued his character, Bill.

So what's a woman to do? Here are some tips:

1. Make the first move: Go talk to him. Compliment his awesome dancing ability. Hey, it worked for Naomi Watts!

2. Set up the next date: Take a lesson from Anna Paquin, and tell him when you want to see him again. Don't wait the obligatory 48 hours to text and/or call.

3. Don't be shy: Even if you tend to be on the quieter sell, go outside of your comfort zone and show your outgoing side. There's no place for hesitation when you're going after a man.

So, next time you're out with your girlfriends and you see a cute guy across the room, channel Naomi, Rachel, Leann and Anna ... and send him a drink.

Naomi Watts Says She Seduced Liev Schreiber

Actress Naomi Watts isn't afraid to make the first move, reports People. In an interview with More Magazine, Watts revealed that sparks flew from the moment she and future partner Liev Schreiber met at the Metropolitan Museum of Art's annual costume ball several years ago. After chatting and flirting for a short while, the two exchanged numbers. “We spoke on the phone for several weeks and emailed,” said Watts, who was in Los Angeles at the time. “And then I made up some excuse to come to New York and the rest is history.”

As a woman, how do you make the first moves on a man?

Cupid’s Advice:

Breaking gender roles and making the first move can be tough, but it’s not impossible. Here are a few tips to help you make it work:

1. Show your interest: Your date may be just as nervous as you are about making the first move, so make sure he knows that you’re interested. After flirting, try saying something like, “I wanted to see that movie!” Your date may suggest that you see it together.

2. Go on a group date: If asking your love interest on an actual date is too forward for you, try asking him on a group date. Having mutual friends with you will make you both more at ease.

3. Be confident: If making the first move has you overly anxious, your discomfort will be apparent. Boosting your confidence will make asking much easier, and it will also make him interested.

Celebrity Couples Make a Blessing Out of Interfaith Relationships

By Erika Hymowitz Vujnovich

Chelsea Clinton/Marc Mezvinsky, Naomi Watts/Liev Schreiber, Tom Cruise/Katie Holmes and even Brad Pitt/Angelina Jolie are among the numerous celebrity couples attempting to make an interfaith relationship work. While it's nice to believe the old saying "love conquers all," there are often many challenges an interfaith couple faces. Speaking from experience, I entered into an interfaith marriage five years ago. It has taken a tremendous amount of respect and understanding between me and my husband to make our relationship work and to be able to provide a stable foundation for our children.

ABC News says that one in three U.S. couples is in a religiously mixed marriage. However, back in June, the Chicago Family Law Blog highlighted the issue and cited data taken from a 2001 American Religious Identification Survey, which show couples in mixed-religion families were three times more likely to be divorced than those who were of the same faith. The New York Times also wrote on the issue this past summer, following the high-profile marriage of Chelsea Clinton and Marc Mezvinsky. Clinton, a Methodist and Mezvinsky, who is Jewish, pushed the issue of mixed marriage into the spotlight again.

Whether mixed-religion marriages are becoming the new norm or not, if you are in such a relationship and are questioning whether or not it can work, here are a few things to consider:

1. Don't ignore the differences: Religion often contributes to who we are. As such, it's crucial not to disregard religious beliefs. One of the top mistakes that couples make is that they believe their love for one another will conquer all interfaith marital problems. This is not always true. Take the time to discuss your beliefs. You may find that your partner feels the same way, or you may realize you come from completely different backgrounds.

2. Look for clergy counseling: If you're looking for that mixed marriage blessing, you'll want to consider speaking with clergy from your place of worship. When my husband and I first considered getting married, we immediately went to meet with my Rabbi. He was very open to the idea of us getting married, with the understanding that we will raise our children in the Jewish faith. A member of the clergy will help outline the challenges you may face as a couple as well as give advice on how to best approach your respective families, who may not be as accepting.

3. Think of the children: The last thing you'll want to do is make a child decide which religion they want to follow. Before you even have children, you and your spouse should decide how you want to raise them. Lay the foundation from the beginning, and be honest with each other about your wishes. You don't want to confuse your child, but rather give them a solid sense of faith and culture. There is nothing wrong with celebrating all holidays, but make sure that as your children get older, they have a belief system.
