By Nicole Maher

In the latest celebrity news, Bachelor Nation stars Victoria Fuller and Chris Soules called off their relationship due to geographical reasons. According to UsMagazine.com, Fuller was not ready to move to Iowa and join Soules on his farm. The two had been traveling to see each other since April of this year, but were ultimately unable to reach a decision on where to settle down together. While the pair agreed to a celebrity break-up, they have reportedly been staying in contact with each other.

In celebrity break-up news, Victoria and Chris split due to location. What do you do if you're in a long distance relationship and can't agree on a place to live together eventually?

Cupid's Advice:

Distance can be one of the most difficult factors of a relationship to navigate. Whether someone is a long car ride away or only accessible by plane, the challenge of seeing each other can have a toll on the relationship. If you are looking for ways to overcome the challenges of distance as a couple, Cupid has some advice for you:

1. Meet in the middle: One of the main reasons people do not want to uproot their life and move is because they are familiar with their current surroundings. It can be difficult to convince a person to leave their family and friends and move to a completely new place where they only know one person. But if both partners are willing to meet someplace in the middle, it would allow both of them to remain closer to home and to each other.

2. Continue to travel: If the impending distance does not need to be resolved right away, then continue your current travel methods. Circumstances and priorities may change after a period of time, and the two of you may eventually reach a point of agreement on where to finally settle down together.

3. Be honest with yourself: If you and your partner have had multiple conversations about the distance and there has been no compromise on either side, it might be time to consider the alternative of breaking-up. Breaking-up does not mean that the relationship failed, it simply means that the two people involved are progressing in different directions. In this case it may be two different geographical locations.

Bachelor* fans are really trying to figure out what's happening with Chris Soules and Victoria Fuller. What are some reasons to keep your relationship under wraps at first?

Cupid's Advice:

Navigating the rocky waters of the dating scene can definitely be challenging and once you've found someone, you won't want to let go! If you're debating whether or not to go public with your new relationship, Cupid has some advice for you:

1. Listen to your partner: There are two people in your relationship and you always have to remember that. Even though you may have strong feelings towards a certain subject, your partner's opinions should be taken into account as well. Allow them to share their thoughts on publicizing your relationship or keeping it under wraps so the two of you are on the same page. If you are still exploring each other and your emotions, that's definitely a reason to keep it private.

2. Think about the family: Take a new relationship slowly and move at your own pace. If you're not ready to share your relationship with your family, that is okay! Maybe they weren't too fond of your ex and that's left you wary of introducing them to someone new. Or they can be a bit overprotective and might scare off a new partner. Whatever the case may be, remember this is your life and you make the decisions.

3. Not ready for the friends: Aside from family, your friends are probably the most important people in your life. Introducing them to someone new is a big step step for everyone! At the end of the day, all they want is for you to be happy and feeling loved, but sometimes gaining their approval is quite the feat. Avoiding judgement or potentially disapproving friends are definitely reasons to keep your relationship a secret for a while.
