

Willis McGahee

Willis McGahee is a former American football running back who played in the NFL. Prior to this, he played college football at the University of Miami and even earned an athletics scholarship based on his skill in the sport. In 2003, he was drafted into the Buffalo Bills during the NFL's first round picks, but was later traded to the Baltimore Ravens in 2007 after making disparaging remarks about Buffalo. With the Ravens, McGahee flourished, accruing over 3,300 total yards from scrimmage, as well as 35 total regular season touchdowns, 31 of which were rushing touchdowns. This made McGahee the highest touchdown scoring Raven in the last half decade. Despite doing well with the Ravens, he was traded to the Denver Broncos in 2011. McGahee was made team captain of the Broncos and led them to success up until he experienced an injury the following year that put him out of commission for the rest of the season. Finally in 2013, McGahee left to join the Cleveland Browns. He ultimately finished his career with 377 rushing yards and retired shortly after.

In terms of celebrity relationships, McGahee has the reputation of being a ladies man, fathering several children with different mothers. McGahee is very open about his relationships, citing a lack of maturity for many of the relationship problems he's faced. McGahee has had his share of celebrity relationships including Kandi Burruss from The Real Housewives of Atlanta and Olympian sprinter Marshevet Hooker. The latest development in McGahee's career is his appearance on the E! reality TV show Famously Single. As a cast member of the show, he joins seven other celebrities and relationship experts in order to discuss their relationship problems. Throughout the series, McGahee carried out an ongoing flirtation with castmate, Jessica White. The pair secretly made out multiple times without the other cast members knowing. McGahee tried and failed to ignite a hotter spark with White.