

Celebrity News: Rihanna & Drake Go 'Dancing and Drinking' After 2016 MTV VMAs

By Stephanie Sacco

Rihanna and Drake are at the forefront of celebrity gossip right now after the 2016 MTV VMAs. In celebrity news, Drake presented her with the Vanguard Award and admitted his love to her. According to EOnline.com, the celebrity couple was seen at the Up&Down nightclub where they partied in celebration after the VMAs for a night of drinking and dancing. Sources saw them walk in holding hands.

This celebrity news has us aww-ing. How do you know when to officially confirm your relationship with friends and family?

Cupid's Advice:

Confirming your relationship is a big step, but confirming your relationship with your family and friends is even bigger. Picking the right time to drop that bomb is key. Cupid is here to help:

1. Time: Depending on how long you've been dating and how much time you've spent together, you'll know when is right to confirm your relationship. It takes time to build up the relationship in its own right. Then you have to ease him into the family.

Related Link: Celebrity News: Drake Confesses Love for Rihanna at VMAs

2. Trust: Once you trust your partner and know it's going somewhere, it's time to share him. If you can see a future with him, you are ready to make big plans. Don't waste your family's time if you don't see it going anywhere.

Related Link: Why Rihanna & Drake Haven't Made Their Celebrity Relationship Official

3. When they are: It's not just up to you when it comes to your partner. Be sure he's ready to meet everybody too. Don't force them to do anything, but discuss it ahead of time. Make sure you're on the same page.

How do you know when to introduce your partner to your friends and family? Comment below!