Cupid’s Advice:

Parenting can seem like a huge, daunting responsibility. Cupid is here with the top tips on knowing when you and your partner are ready for your next big adventure; kids:

1. You’re financially secure: Before you and your partner start taking the necessary steps to expanding your family tree, make sure you’re in a good place financially to add a member to your family unit. After all, to give your child a wonderful life, you’ll need some sort of financial security, and to be in a position where you can rest easy knowing that you’ll always be able to provide for kid’s wants and needs. Make sure both you and your partner are ready to make the sacrifices and do the hard work to be in a good financial position for your child’s future.

2. Both you and your partner want children: This may seem like a no-brainer, but it’s an important conversation to have.

After all, for some having children is not even on their radar, and you don't want your partner to feel pressured into the decision to have a kid by your enthusiasm or desire for one. Sit down with your partner and make sure you're both on the same page, that you know what you want and that you have similar goals and plans for the future when it comes to your family-life.

3. You can present a united front with your partner: It's never a good idea to try and use a child to "save" an already-failing relationship. If you and your partner are on the rocks, have poor communication, or a ton of unresolved issues, deal with those issues first and foremost before even considering having a kid. While it may seem like having a child would bring you and your partner together, in reality, bringing children into an already crumbling relationship is just a recipe for disaster and a lot of hurt on every side.
