

Celebrity News: Kate Hudson Makes Red Carpet Debut with Boyfriend Danny Fujikawa

By Noelle Downey

In celebrity news, actress and celebrity mom Kate Hudson has made it red-carpet official with boyfriend Danny Fujikawa. According to UsMagazine.com, the celebrity couple shared a passionate kiss in front of dozens of camera flashes while on their way into the premiere of Snatched, which stars Hudson's mother, Goldie Hawn, alongside comedic actress Amy Schumer. The pair were spotted enjoying their Hollywood relationship in March, and Hudson seemed, "really flirty" and "not shy about it at all" an eyewitness to the couple's canoodling spilled.

On the red carpet at the premiere, Hudson and Fujikawa were joined by Hawn and her husband Kurt Russell, who both gushed about Fujikawa to press. "He's a great guy," beloved actress Hawn enthused, "Yeah, he's very special actually." Russell added his praise, saying, "I always approve. Kate brings good guys."

This celebrity news is certainly the next step in Kate Hudson's relationship. What are some ways to know you're ready for the next step in your relationship?

Cupid's Advice:

Cupid is here with some top tips on how to know when you and your partner are ready to take the next big step in your relationship:

1. When you both know what you want: Make sure that before you take your relationship public or put any kind of labels on what you're doing, sit down and talk about what you're both ultimately looking for. Are you interested in a long-term commitment? Are you just looking for something casual? Do you want to get married? Will you ever want to? In casual dating these questions aren't really a concern, but when it comes to a relationship getting serious, it's vital to know where your partner stands on where you're going as a couple, so sit down and talk it out before things go any further.

Related Link: Celebrity Relationships: Kate Hudson Says 'I Am Dating'

2. When your communication is going great: If you're going to be in a serious relationship, it's time to get real about communication. If you two struggle to hold a serious conversation in which you can actually share your thoughts and emotions with one another, it's time to give some serious thought about whether you're both ready to be in a serious relationship together. Any good couple has great communication or is working hard towards that goal, so if you always know you can go and talk to your partner, that's a good sign that you're in a good place to begin something more serious.

Related Link: Kate Hudson Looks Up to Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell's Relationship

3. When your friends and family love them: Approval from friends and family doesn't have to mean everything, and let's be honest, sometimes people just don't get along no matter how awesome they are when they're separated. However, it's also really amazing when your friends and family can see the great person you're with as... well, great. Especially if you come from a close-knit family or friend group it can be really important for you to feel like your significant other is accepted. And if every single one of the people you love is telling you that your partner doesn't seem right for you, it may be time to think about why they all seem to be saying the same thing. Relationships where it seems to be you and them against the rest of the world never end very well.

Are you in a relationship that's pretty serious? How did you know it was time to take the plunge from casual dating to something more? Let us know in the comments!