In celebrity news, singer Niall Horan and actress/singer Hailee Steinfeld have called it quits. The celebrity relationship was strong over the summer, but the couple hasn't been together for a few months. The pair kept their time together on the down-low, and according to E! Online, a source shared that "Hailee realized she had a lot on her plate and her work schedule was insanely busy. She was gearing up for a huge press tour for her new movie," and she ultimately realized they "would be apart for mass amounts of time." Neither of them have spoken about the break-up.

In celebrity break-up news, Niall Horan and Hailee Steinfeld are no more. What are some ways to keep a busy work schedule from affecting your relationship?

Cupid's Advice:

How can you keep a busy work schedule from affecting your relationship? Cupid has some thoughts:

1. Share a calendar: You and your partner can put everything you do in a calendar or planner. It will be clear when you have plans and when you don't so you can use any extra time to plan something with each other instead of trying to randomly schedule time.

2. Plan a time where the two of you can spend time with each other: The two of you can plan a day during the week where you only spend time with each other. It'll give you a chance to catch up with each other as well devote your full attention to one another. The time will just be for the two of you, and will allow you to strengthen the relationship after being so busy.

3. Take the free time you have to show appreciation for your partner: The two of you might not be able to see each other all of the time, but you can still appreciate each other. Send messages to your partner throughout the day to let them know you're thinking about them. You could also get your partner something you know they like to show them they're important even though you are busy.
