How do you keep your faith in relationships after a break-up?

Cupid’s Advice:

A bad break-up can have anyone promising themselves that “this will be the last time.” However, Cupid has an idea or two about regaining your faith in relationships:

- 1. Live and learn: Take each relationship’s end as a lesson for the future. Walk away with a few pointers you didn’t have before in order to stop you from making the same mistake twice.
- 2. Disregard the lover, not the love: Love isn’t the one who has wronged you. Blaming relationships for what you’re currently feeling is misplaced anger. Remind yourself that love never fails; only lovers do.
- 3. It’s never too late: There is no deadline for finding “the one.” Appreciate each relationship for the happiness it brings to your life, and keep an eye out for Cupid’s arrow.
