The breakup is hard for both of them, but it's the most realistic thing at this point." Hochstadt and Bosworth had been living together, and Hochstadt was supposedly planning on proposing before the two decided to end things.

How do you know if the timing is right for a relationship?

Cupid's Advice:

As much as you might love each other and want the relationship to work, sometimes two people are just in different places in life. Cupid has some ways to tell if the timing is right for your relationship:

1. You have time for one another: If you have too much going on in your individual lives to make time for one another, it might not be the right time to be together.

2. You are genuinely interested in and respect what the other person is doing: If you don't respect or appreciate the path that your significant other has chosen for his life, it might be a sign that you're going in different directions.

3. You're constantly looking for an excuse to end things: If every time the two of you have a problem or an argument you use it as a way out of the relationship, it might mean it's not the right time for a relationship. Only say you want to break up when you truly do.
