How do you introduce your kids to your new partner?

Cupid's Advice:

Introducing your kids to your new partner can be a touchy situation. Cupid has some tips:

1. Evaluate everything: Introducing your new partner to your children is something that shouldn't be taken lightly. Consider your situation and your new relationship carefully before you take this next step. If you are really serious with your love interest and are committed, it's a good idea to be honest to your children.

2. Be somewhere neutral: When you initially introduce your children to your new significant other, it should be somewhere neutral. It should be done in a place where they feel safe and comfortable. Make sure you consider the childrens' ages first. Perhaps a zoo or amusement park is a good option, somewhere they can have fun after having a "grown-up" talk.

3. Keep it simple: When your children are first getting to know your new flame, make sure everything stays light. Try to limit the public affection in the very beginning and then slowly ease into it. Make sure you give your partner details about your kids and share their likes and dislikes. This makes the bonding process much easier.

Cupid's Advice:

As much as you need alone time with your partner, it's fun to break out of your usual routine and spend some time with your couple friends. Here are three reasons why you should plan a double date for this weekend:

1. Try something new: It's easy to get stuck in a rut of going to the same Italian restaurant before seeing the latest romantic comedy at your local theater. Your friends, though, may motivate you to head to that new Greek cafe and then go bowling instead.

Cupid's Advice:

1. True love: If you and the other person genuinely have romantic feelings for each other and truly care about one another, it may be a good idea to give them a second chance. Sometimes you will just always love someone and have a special place for them in your heart, but know that you can't actually be with them. If the love runs deep and is present, it could be worth rekindling. A lot of people have to split to find themselves and figure things out.

If the reason for the split is something that they did, feel out if they are truly sorry and making the appropriate changes. How do you know when you’re ready to bring your partner home for the holidays?

Cupid’s Advice:

Although many people usually complain about being single during the holidays, it’s not so easy for couples either! The big question is for many pairs is whether or not you should bring your lover home for the holidays. Cupid knows it can be stressful, so here are three ways to tell if you’re ready for your new partner to spend this special time with your family:

1. They have met your loved ones before: If your significant other has never met your parents, the holidays may be an awkward time to introduce them. It’ll be intimidating to expect your beau to get to know your entire family (including your crazy aunt) during this stressful time of cooking, gift giving, and party-hopping.

If they seem to be in good spirits about the holidays, it’s worth broaching the subject of bringing them home with you.

How should parents talk to their children about relationships?

Cupid's Advice:

Every kid looks up to their parents, and it's only natural for them to eventually get curious about their mom and dad's relationship. Parents, then, have the opportunity to explain to their kids how to have healthy and strong love. Here are three things to remember when it comes to talking to your children about happy relationships:

1. It's never too early: It's never too early to bring up the topic of romantic partnerships with your children. It is actually better to discuss it before they begin forming their own relationships with others, so don't be afraid to approach the topic.
