Cupid's Advice:

Co-parenting isn't anyone's ideal situation, but it's a lot of people's reality. It can be hard to maneuver the best way to co-parent with your ex. Cupid has some advice for you:

1. Always communicate: It can be difficult to keep talking to your ex after you break-up, but if you have children together it's so important to keep communicating. You are both still parents whether you're together or not, and that means you still need to make decisions together pertaining to your kids. Keep your ex informed, and they should do the same with you.

2. Have a plan: Once you and your partner break up, you need to create a plan when it comes to the kids. Sit down with your ex and figure out who the kids are going to live with, when the kids are going to visit the other parent, who's going to have the kids on which holidays, who's going to take the kids to school and all of the other little details. Agree on the details, and stick to them for consistency in your kids' lives.

In celebrity break-up news, Josh Lucas’ ex-wife is airing her grievances publicly. What are some things to consider before going public with relationship disagreements?

Cupid's Advice:

Having a disagreement with your partner can really be difficult, and sometimes you can be airing your dirty laundry without realizing it just because you need to vent. If you tend to go public with your relationship disagreements before considering all of the consequences, Cupid has some advice for you:

1. Think of the kids: Relationship disputes can be a really delicate situation, but when there are kids involved, it only makes it more complicated. You don't want your kids to be involved in adult conflict, and when you go public with your relationship drama, it can easily be overheard by your children. So, before you publicize your relationship disagreement, think about your kids. Put them first.

2. What will your family and friends think?: When you tell your family and friends about your relationship feud, it can really paint a negative picture of your partner in their heads. If you decide to work out your differences and forgive your partner, your family and friends might not forgive them so easily, which will make gatherings really awkward. Your complaints can be taken to heart by your family and friends, making your partner seeming like a terrible person.

3. You'll receive everyone's two cents: Having everyone know that you and your partner are having relationship issues can result in everyone giving their unwanted opinions. Hearing their thoughts about your relationship can stress you out. Sometimes unwanted opinions can lead to blowing smaller issues out of proportion, which only results in more conflict. When you deal with your relationship issues internally, you'll focus on your opinion alone, and that's ultimately the only one that matters.

Cupid's Advice:

When it comes to love you have to give it your all even if it's the end! Cupid has 3 last-ditch efforts that could save your relationship:

1. Take the b-word off the table: You don't want a possible break-up to be hanging over your heads. So, take it off the table, because in order to make the relationship work, you must create a safe space. This means no ultimatums and no threats of any kind. This also includes planning, thinking about breaking up or pursuing other relationship as if you're going to break up. This is serious, as using the b-word creates uncertainty and pressure in a relationship. You have to completely remove breaking up from the table.

2. Opportunity to evolve: In order for a relationship to heal, vulnerability has to be reintroduced to the relationship. Cupid's Advice:

It can truly be a tough time in your life after you split from a partner you were together with for so long. You don't need to expose all of the details to every single one of your friends and family if you do not wish to. If you keep to yourself and a few close friends, here is what can happen:

1. You will be able to explore your true self: Without the input from others, you will have the opportunity to really understand what you are feeling. Sometimes, it isn't bad to have input from the ones you trust most, but this can occasionally lead to you thinking that you are feeling one way when you are really not. It is most beneficial to get to know yourself alone during this time.

2. You won't receive as much judgement: This is hard for you as it is, you don't need further scrutiny to just make this situation even worse. When people go through break-ups, it is really difficult for outsiders to truly understand the emotions and feelings that you go through. Therefore, they may judge. You can minimize that by conducting your life in a more private manner.

3. You won't be bombarded: The more details you put out there, the more people will crowd you with questions. "Why did you break-up?" "Was there cheating involved?" "Are you guys still talking at all?" It can become overwhelming. It is okay to just stick to talking to one specific person that you trust most to help get you through this time and then let the magical self-growth occur.
