Break-ups can be the talk of the town even if you aren't a celebrity. It's like Miranda Lambert sings, "Everybody dies famous in a small town." Whether you're living in the public eye or not, it can be difficult to navigate after a break-up. Cupid has some dating advice on how to handle the public fallout:

1. Put a smile on: Although it may be difficult to wear a smile after breaking up with someone you clearly cared for, you have to do so eventually. You're going to go places that will remind you of your ex, and you're going to run into people who will know about the split. Try to embrace it all, and remember you're strong and still have many things to be happy about.

How do you know when to call it quits on your relationship?

Cupid's Advice:

Every so often things take a turn (possibly for the worst) in the relationship, and you are left asking yourself if you and your partner should just separate. Although the warning signs are typically loud and clear, you may be blinded by a few other things. Cupid has some ways to help you decide when it is time to call it quits:

1. Tension and arguments: Do not refuse to see the elephant in the room. If you and your significant other just cannot seem to come to common ground and are constantly going back and forth with each other, reevaluate the relationship. Is it worth the daily headaches? This is a question you must ask yourself and your partner.

they have no valid reason as to why it disappeared all of a sudden or a solution to the problem, it may be time to call it quits.
