In any relationship, you and your partner should always discuss what things you both feel are private in your relationship. Cupid has some things to keep in mind about privacy in your relationship:

1. Social media: If you open up on social media about your current relationship, exes that you're still friends with may see what you're doing and may try causing drama in your life. Revealing too much about your relationship can leave you open and exposed to the antics of a rejected ex.

2. Everyone won't be happy for you: Your relationship may bring you haters. Not everyone will rejoice in the sight of your union, which will leave you and your partner open to critics. The fewer people who know about your private life, the less feedback you'll have to deal with.

3. Added pressure on your relationship: By putting your relationship out in the open, you give people permission to idolize your relationship. Sharing your every move in your private life can put your relationship in a position to be the prototype of what real love is. This can convince people that they want what you have solely based on what they have seen. This can put a lot of pressure on you and your relationship. You may want to go above and beyond the expectations for your followers, which makes it easy to lose sight of what's really important, building an unbreakable bond with your significant other.

3. Financial stability: As a parent, you already know how expensive having a child is. However, some expenses are lessened because you already have things from the last child. There's also the long-term things like daycare and schooling added on to your daily expenses. According to USDA estimates, two-parent households spend's 27% of their income on one child, as the children multiply: two children 41% and three 47%. It's a lot to consider. There are a lot of doubts and what ifs, but let your decision come from your heart.
