In celebrity news, Chris Lane believes that his time spent in quarantine with wife, Lauren Bushnell has made them closer. What are some ways to strengthen your relationship during a difficult time?

Cupid's Advice:

Couples experience challenges at numerous points during the course a relationship. If you are looking for ways to strengthen your partnership during a tough time, Cupid has some advice for you:

1. Express yourself: Make sure you are always communicating with your partner. No matter the situation, an open line of honest and transparent communication is crucial to any successful relationship. Tell your partner how you are feeling and allow yourself to listen so they can do the same. Whatever you are going through together or personally, make sure you are there for each other no matter what.

2. Appreciate each other's company: Similar to the Lane's, you may be navigating through the uncertainty of our current world crisis. In times like these, it's important to stay calm and remain inside so you are protecting yourself and your loved ones. Use this time to strengthen your relationship with your partner. Make dinner together every night and try to do something fun indoors! Maybe a board game after dinner or a movie marathon with all the flicks you've both been wanting to check out.

3. Alone time is okay: You don't need to spend every second of the day with your partner just because you think it will help your relationship. It's important to make time for yourself and allow each other to spend time apart. Suffocating your loved one especially when they are going through a challenging time, may push them away even more. Show your partner how much you care about them by acknowledging their needs before your own. The ability to listen to your partner's feelings will definitely strengthen your relationship in the long run.
