Cupid's Advice:

Having children leads to large changes in everyone's lives, but these changes can be especially challenging for those who struggle to maintain mental health. What mental health considerations should you make before having kids? Cupid has some advice:

1. Change in hormones: Pregnancy and childbirth are two events that cause large changes to a woman's hormones, which could also affect her mental health. If you are considering having children but are worried about the changes it will cause to your body because of your mental health, getting the advice of both a psychologist and an obstetrician can help you decide when the best time to try for a child may be.

2. Higher energy levels: Having and raising children requires large amounts of energy, which is something that may already be a struggle for someone with inconsistent mental health. While having a kid may allow for less rest days, there are many ways to structure your schedule that allow you to prioritize both raising your child and maintaining your balance of energy. On days where your energy is lower, try relying more on your partner or a babysitter.

3. Constant enthusiasm: Whether it's their first birthday, first steps, or first day of school, there is so much to celebrate as your child grows up. However, this constant need to have enthusiasm may be difficult for someone struggling to maintain good mental health. Waiting until you have more enthusiasm in your daily life to have a kid may be a good idea to prevent you from feeling like you're missing out on celebrating important milestones.

How do you turn a failing marriage around?

Cupid's Advice:

Marriages begin to self-destruct for many reasons – whether it be from lack of trust, intimacy or communication. When your marriage reaches a certain point, it's time for you to decide whether you're going to fight to save the relationship or let it go. If you choose to take the steps toward reconciliation, you have to know where to start first. Cupid has some advice:

1. No fighting: When you and your partner have an issue to address, don't resort to verbal abuse. Think about what you say before you say it, no matter how emotional you may be feeling at the time. If you feel yourself reaching your boiling point, take a step back and cool off. Don't let your rash decisions and emotions ruin a relationship you considered perfection not so long ago.

2. Get to know each other: Sometimes you have to start all over to get back to the relationship you used to have with someone. You've probably been out of touch with your partner for so long that you don't even remember the little things that make him or her smile. Start from scratch. Let go of all the bad memories and try to rebuild from the good ones. Talking to each other again – even if it's just about the basics (like your spouse's new favorite song) is taking a step in the right direction.

3. Be patient: Don't assume your marriage will be fixed overnight and don't give up at the first sign of struggle. It's going to take some time to gain back the love and trust the two of you once had in each other. When you do finally bounce back, the two of you, as a couple, will be stronger than ever.
