How do you decide how long of an engagement to have?

Cupid's Advice:

Many couples start to plan the details of their wedding right after they decide to get engaged. While there's nothing wrong with starting to prepare for your special day, this is also the time to just live in the moment with the one you've chosen to love forever. Cupid is here to help:

1. Talk to your partner: Once you get over the initial excitement of being engaged, you should sit down and talk to your significant other about when they envision getting married. You might want to tie the knot as soon as possible, while your honey wants to enjoy the engagement for awhile. There's nothing wrong with waiting to make plans, but compromise if you have to.

2. Big or small wedding: How long your engagement is will depend on how long it takes to prepare for your wedding. If you're dreaming of something extravagant, it's going to take some time to put all of your ideas in place. Keeping your special day small and simple with just a few friends and family members would be the best thing to do if you don't plan on being engaged for longer than six months.

3. Road blocks: There's no rush to get married, especially if you or your partner have other priorities. For example, your love just started a new job and you're in your last semester of school. Tie off any loose ends before jumping over the broom. You can get your life started together without saying 'I do.'

How do you know when it's "meant to be"?

Cupid's Advice:

Whether you've been with someone for a while, or you've fallen head over heels right away, you may start wondering if he is "the one." Here are some signs that you and your partner could be in for a lifetime of romance:

1. You support each other: It's important to be with someone who will constantly empower you to be your best self. If he encourages you to go after your goals and recognize your own greatness, this may just be a sure thing!

2. You communicate well: Just because the two of you work well together doesn't mean you won't hit some speed bumps. If you can get through your arguments by speaking your part while still listening to and appreciating his, it shows how much you care, even if you disagree on certain points.

3. You're genuinely happy: The emotions and energy you have when you're with your significant other are the best way to tell if he's right for you. If you feel great about yourself and he makes you want to be a better person, stick with it! If you feel fearful or put down, it's time to let him go.
