What are some benefits of keeping your nuptials under wraps?

Cupid's Advice:

Not every bride and groom dreams of a big wedding with extravagant bouquets, a five-course meal, and a guest list that includes everyone they've ever met. Some, like Gordon-Levitt and his new wife, prefer to keep their special day more low-key. Here are three benefits to keeping your nuptials under wraps:

1. You can make it personal: It's easy to get caught up in the festivities and start worrying about making your future mother-in-law or grandmother happy instead of focusing on what makes you and your partner happy. By keeping your big news to yourself, you'll be able to do what you want and just enjoy your time together as newlyweds.

2. You can save money: If you're trying to stick to a strict budget, remember that each additional guest costs more money. The smaller your wedding, the more you can save! Plus, with less people in attendance, you'll feel less pressure to fill the space with gorgeous (and expensive) flowers, candles, and other decor.

3. You can settle into life as husband and wife: Even if you've been together for a few years or already share a home, your relationship will inevitably change after you tie the knot. If you keep your big news private, you'll have a chance to get used to your new roles as spouses without your loved ones sharing their best pieces of (unsolicited) advice or nagging you about your thank you notes.

What are some ways to take a new relationship slowly?

Cupid’s Advice:

When you’re excited about a new relationship, it’s easy to get carried away. Here are a few ways to take things slowly:

1. Plan infrequent dates: Even if you aren’t busy, you should still avoid planning dates too frequently. Keep your outings few and far between at the beginning of the relationship so that you get to know each other gradually.

2. Limit your affection: Kissing your partner speeds up a relationship. To take things slowly, try waiting until the second or third date to show physical affection.

3. Wait on an introduction: It's okay to tell your friends and family about your new relationship, but don't allow them to meet your new partner until the two of you have dated for a while. Waiting on an introduction will limit your partner's influence in your life.
