How do you keep a casual relationship on the down-low?

Cupid's Advice:

Sometimes when a relationship is new it is best to keep things casual until you figure out whether or not it has the potential to go beyond. Hooking up can be great if they are done correctly. They allow a couple time to figure things out with no major public losses if things go south. We've pulled some tips to help keep your causal relationship, well, causal.

1. Stay away from social media: In a world that is so technology obsessed, posting your relationship on any social media will lead to questions. Who is this guy? Where did you meet him? Why haven't you said anything to us about him? If your man is constantly in your snap story, or on your Facebook timeline, people are bound to talk. Just lay low for a while and then slowly branch out when you feel it's time to let everyone else in the loop.

2. Go on more private dates: When trying to get to know a person it can be hard to see what they're really about when you have multiple distractions. Stick to more intimate style, or one on one type dates when you're still exploring your feelings together. This way you'll be able to ask questions, exchange stories and discuss certain topics that you may not have been able to in a group setting or out in a busy place.

3. Refrain from spending too much time together: With a new relationships, every 'first' moment is extremely exciting, but you don't want to get too anxious and over-invested before things really hit it off. Spending a lot of time together can overwhelm a person. By jumping into things too quickly you start searching for emotions that may not even be there yet. Play it cool and just stick to seeing each other a couple times a week instead of every day.

Kelly Osbourne and Matthew Mosshart End Engagement

By Brittany Stubbs

Not all engagements make it to the white dress and fancy ceremony. Kelly Osbourne and Matthew Mosshart have called off their engagement after two years together. “Kelly Osbourne and Matthew Mosshart have decided to end their engagement,” Osbourne’s rep tell UsMagazine.com. “The split is amicable and the pair continue to have nothing but the utmost respect for one another. Kelly is looking forward to a new year full of fresh beginnings.” Meeting in the summer of 2011, the TV personality and vegan chef had confirmed their engagement in July 2013 in a romantic Anguilla proposal.

What are some reasons to call off an engagement?

Cupid's Advice:

Although the thought of calling of your happily-ever-after is tragic, there are times when it is unfortunately necessary. Granted, it might be one of the hardest decisions you will ever have to make, but remind yourself that calling off an engagement now is much easier than ending in divorce down the road:

1. Infidelity: Everyone has their own opinions on cheating—whether it's always a complete deal-breaker or just depends on the circumstance—but if your partner is already being unfaithful before you tie the knot, what will they be doing after several years of marriage? Think about it, is a ceremony and contract going to suddenly change their ways?

2. Serious second thoughts: It's important to preface this item by clarifying there's a difference between getting cold feet and rethinking the entire engagement. It's normal for one to get nervous as the wedding date begins to approach, but if one of you is seriously wondering if you're ready to make this commitment or are not convinced your union will last, it may be a sign the engagement needs to be called off, or at least put on pause.

3. Unresolved issues: Every relationship has their conflicts, but if there are some serious issues between the two of you that have yet to be worked out, it's important to resolve them before walking down the aisle. Issues don't go away just because you're married. Often times, couples believe if they just seal the deal, the old problems will disappear, but they'll still be there at the end of the day, with or without that marriage certificate. So if there are issues weighing on your relationship, consider calling off the engagement until they're resolved.
