Winners from the show The Amazing Race, Cheyne Whitney and Meghan Rickey, tied the knot Saturday in front of over 200 of their friends and family. "I'm a little bit hoarse, a little sick, but I'm excited ... this is our day," Whitney said. "It's been perfect. The ceremony couldn't have been better." The guests included some other Amazing Race duos, such as professional poker players Tiffany Michelle and Maria Ho, father and son duo Sam and Dan McMillen, who finished in second place and recently divorced Brian Kleinschmidt and Ericka Dunlap, who finished in third place.

What are ways to decide who to include in your wedding party?

Cupid's Advice:

It's tough to narrow down who to include in your wedding party. Cupid has a few suggestions to consider before you decide:

1. Blood runs thicker than water: It's probably important to always include your closest family members in your party. It's always worse to have a scorned brother, sister or cousin than a neglected friend.

2. The pawns: The friends who introduced you and your spouse deserve at least an invitation to the ceremony. Try to include them if you're still friends with them.

3. 'I love you, man': Whether big or small, your closest friends ought to be present, even if it's just one or two of your closest friends.
