

'Boy Meets World' Star Danielle Fishel Marries Tim Belusko

By Kerri Sheehan

Boy Meets World star Danielle Fishel tied the knot in a “short and sweet” ceremony in Los Angeles. Her rep confirmed to People that the 32-year-old actress is now wife to Tim Belusko, 25. The bride recently said, “The most important thing is that the day feel authentic to us.” The couple wanted a traditional wedding that also showcased their wacky side. Over 200 guests gathered to watch the pair say, “I do.” Fishel had previously said, “Tim is the one. He accepts me for exactly who I am!”

How do you make your big day feel ‘authentic’?

Cupid's Advice:

Your wedding day should be perfect. Let Cupid help you make it your own:

1. Make it your own: There's no requirement that says your wedding has to be completely traditional or traditional at all. Don't hesitate to make little changes to your ceremony to make it really feel like your own. It's your day, no one else's

2. Keep it simple: The more over the top your wedding is the more likely you are to feel like it's all just a big show. Your wedding day is your time to show off, but going crazy in that department will make it feel more like entertainment than a union of two lovers.

3. Talk to your partner: You should run any changes you want to make to your ceremony by your mate. If you go ahead and change things without their consent then it will become all about you instead of equally about your both. Make sure there is an equal balance of elements of him and elements of her.

How would you make your big day feel authentic? Share below.